Superintendent Sean Bulson Recognized as a National Family Engagement Changemaker

Harford County Public Schools (HCPS) is proud to announce that Superintendent Dr. Sean Bulson is being recognized as a Family Engagement Changemaker by The School Superintendents Association (AASA), in partnership with the National PTA. Dr. Bulson is one of only three superintendents nationwide selected for this prestigious recognition, which honors leaders who have demonstrated a strong commitment to integrating family engagement into district-wide strategies to support student success.

Dr. Bulson was nominated by Board of Education of Harford County President Aaron Poynton, with additional support from Board Member Wade Sewell, for his leadership in making family engagement a priority across HCPS. This recognition reflects the continued efforts of Harford County Public Schools as we work to build meaningful relationships between schools, families, and the broader community. This work aligns with the Board of Education's Strategic Goal Two, which emphasizes the importance of collaboration and communication to enhance student outcomes.

“This recognition is a testament to the incredible work happening across our district to strengthen family engagement,” said Dr. Bulson. “When families and schools work together, students benefit in every way. I am honored to be recognized alongside other leaders who are committed to this essential work and look forward to continuing to build strong partnerships with our families.”

Dr. Bulson and his fellow honorees will be recognized at the AASA National Conference on Education in March.
